Modern Challenges for Companies

How business produce and sell products today has completely changed. Businesses have to now deal with customer engagement, new services, and subscription models, more direct-to-consumer sales, and various types of partners. Studies show that high-tech manufacturing, consumer goods, and life science companies that don't adapt to these changes can lose 20% of their revenue to more responsive competitors.

Many companies still depend on traditional systems designed for specific departments such as engineering, sales, design. But their systems fail in producing a complete perception of their customer's expectations.
